

Excerpts from Danger By Moonlight –

Relative Clause

Identify the relative clauses. Can you investigate what I have done? Was this how the author write these pages?

Page 54

My arms are wrenched behind my back. A bodyguard, who was uniformed, marches me behind the elephant, through the arched gateway into the Emperor's palace itself.

We plunge into the darkness of the interior, like termites burrowing through the walls. We hustle along tunnels and more tunnels, sometimes going up steps, then down, then up again – so that I would never have been able to find my way back.

Page 55

Hurtling through one of the doorways, which led into cool chambers, was a small boy., barging into me so hard that I am winded and bent double with pain. It is the boy on the elephant.